

Discussion Questions for QUITE THE PAIR

Questions contain spoilers

1. At its core, the third book of the series is Pan's story – not just his love story, but his character arc containing the most growth so far. Did your feelings toward Pan shift as you read this book? At what points did you feel he was his best self? Worst?
2. What did you think of Ares's and Aphrodite's plan to give Pan and Q a "taste of baklava"? Do you think their romp at the Tarra Arms had the desired effect – making Cupid more desperate for Pan?
3. What do you think of Reed as a match for Pan?
4. Do you agree with Hephaestus's decision to send Cupid's bow and arrow? Did you agree with Q's decision not to use it on Pan?
5. Have your predictions about the love triangle on Mt. O changed after reading book 3?
6. Do you agree with Pan and Aphrodite that Cupid has finally performed his duty without a mistake?
7. What is your prediction for the future of Aphrodite's relationship with Q?
8. At the very end of book three, we know Cupid is gloomier than ever. What are your predictions about what is going to happen in book four, the last of the series? Where would you like to see each of the characters at the end of their stories?
